Pedraza - a Medieval Village in Spain

by Kittsie Thomas

Article published on March 15th 2012 | Vacations

Pedraza is a medieval village in Spain and this fact is very much evident from the walls around the village. There is a lovely atmosphere in this village for visitors and they are required to park their cars in the village once they reach it. There is a huge car parking near the castle where the visitors to the village can park their cars. The village is explored by foot as it is not very big and its streets are enjoyable for walking.

People who walk in the streets of Pedraza can surely have an excellent experience. They feel as if they are part of history because the streets are preserved well in their natural style. It is a small village but very attractive especially because it is located in the province of Segovia in Spain. Most people prefer to approach Pedraza from Madrid because it is only one hour's drive from the capital city of Spain.

Though this village was not founded in the medieval times, it is regarded as a medieval village because it developed well in that era. The village was conquered in the fourteenth century and it received major development by its ward authority. Big houses were built in the village and nobles used to reside in this village in medieval times. The village is originally historical and according to historians there were human settlements in this area even in the fourth century before Christ.

The population of the village is not much which makes it a peaceful place to spend time in. The people of the village are friendly and polite. They welcome visitors from Spain as well as from all other parts of the world to their village. In the last two decades the village has gained popularity as a good tourist resort and has been preserved well for the same reason. There are small hotels available for staying in this village and there are excellent restaurants that offer tasty meals to their customers.

There are many attractive places and monuments in this village. The Pedraza castle in the village is around eight centuries old. However it was reconstructed in the fifteenth century and has been preserved well in recent times. Similarly the Santa Maria church is fabulous as it was built in the sixteenth century. The Plaza Mayor is fascinating as it was originally designed as a town square in medieval times.

Article Source:
http://www.articleside.com/vacations-articles/pedraza-a-medieval-village-in-spain.htm - Article Side

Kittsie Thomas - About Author:
Club Villamar offers many holiday villas dispersed all over a villa espagne costa brava and whether on the a locations maison espagne. Holiday in Spain offers not only freedom but also a wide choice a a locations espagne.Learn More About Clubvillamar Holidays on a Kittsie Thomas Blog.

Article Keywords:
location vacances espagne, maison espagne, maison location espagne, locations en espagne, maison en espagne, location maison espagne, location villa en espagne

You can find more free articles on Article Side. Sign up today and share your knowledge to the community! It is completely FREE!