Simple Ideas to Spice up Your Dublin Weekends by Julia Roger

Article published on March 22nd 2012 | Vacations

The capital city of Ireland has a lot to offer to the discerning traveler whether it is a business or a leisure trip. There are many ways to spice up your Dublin weekends and take home delightful experiences and fond memories. Dublin has it all â€“ rich cultural heritage, natural greenery, temperate climate and vibrant nightlife. Itâ€™s the center of art and entertainment and is privileged of being the economic and educational center of Ireland. This youthful city would be your best bet for a classic Irish holiday.

A weekend in Dublin can be soothing and calm, or exciting and action packed depending on the way you plan it. Dublin Castle and The Spire of Dublin mirror the history of this Irish city and are a must-see while in Dublin. Also not to be missed is the St. Patrick's festival, the biggest event and attraction for tourists across the globe. Dublin never disappoints you whether it's adventure or nightlife. If nightlife is what you are looking for, you will be spoiled for choice with the myriad of options available in Dublin.

Temple Bar is where you will find all the fun and excitement and deserves at least one visit during your Dublin holiday. In fact there are so many pubs, restaurants, comedy clubs, and clubbing spots in Dublin that it has now emerged as a popular destination for stag parties and weekends. Your Dublin holiday need not be limited to drink and dance alone. You can spice it up with activities like paintballing, Rugby, Football, Go Karting, Water Sports, and Clay Shooting. So, if you are looking for a European destination that has a bit of everything, you must consider Dublin.

There is so much to do and see in Dublin that it's really hard to handpick spots and activities on your Dublin weekends. A little homework is necessary to ensure that your weekend in Dublin is just the way you wanted it.
