How to Choose Voice over Agents by Julia Roger

Article published on May 16th 2012 | Visual Arts

The enjoyment and perception of an online video or learning program depends on the quality of voice used in it. Choosing a voice that does not fit the video will make it boring. There are many skills required to work as a professional narrator. It is important that voice over agents should sound knowledgeable even if they do not have any command over the subject. Their voice should be capable of handling the mood of the script and the occasion. It is hard to choose voice over UK narrators that can help you with your videos and online lessons.

The first thing to consider is the location where the recording will take place. Working on a local studio will require you to use local talent whereas the national voice over agents will have a setup of their own. It is important to ask for high quality demos from voice over uk agents and generally, these agents have variety of demos according to your requirement. In case the narrator is not having a good demo then it is best to look for some other narrator for the job.

Choice of voice is crucial and it should work with your audience. You have to decide whether a female or male agent will be appropriate for your video. Further, some other factors are to be considered as if some video may require regional accent for getting the attention of the audience. Make sure that the voice suits the subject. Some narrators sound perfect for upbeat treatments and motivational videos whereas some of them may have solemn voice. The choice of narrator depends on your subject, style of voice required, and mood of the content. It is important to consider all of these factors before choosing voice over agents for your videos.
