Polarized Sunglasses Wholesale by Wholesale Sunglasses

Article published on August 6th 2012 | Visual Arts

Polarized sunglasses have become one of the latest fashion trends. Currently they are selling like hotcakes. They are especially popular among boaters, fishermen and divers as the sunglasses significantly cut down on the glare coming from the water. Their ever-increasing benefits make them popular among sports enthusiasts, like skiers, joggers, walkers and golfers.

Wholesale polarized sunglasses can also be worn while driving, as they reduce the glare coming from the road and the hood of the car. But there is some controversy regarding the effect of polarized lenses on snow-covered surfaces. According to the experts, polarized sunglasses reduce the glare of sunlight reflecting off the snow. Others say the sunglasses are not helpful in sports like downhill skiing, as they reduce the wearer's ability to make out certain details on the landscape.

Moreover, it has been also noticed that polarized sunglasses react negatively with liquid crystal displays, or LCDs, which are found on the dashboard of some cars, and are common at ATMs with digital screens. When LCD displays are viewed through polarized lenses they become invisible, from certain angles. But despite these negatives, the sunglasses remain popular. Polarized sunglasses are still the favorites of sports fans and drivers.

Wholesale polarized sunglasses are usually only sold to retailers, since they will be spreading the brand name around. But individuals can also try negotiating with wholesalers to get the best deal.

So if you are a driver or biker, or even enjoy activities like skiing or boating, then wholesale polarized sunglasses may be a wise investment.
