The internet is a phenomenon the like of which has not yet been seen. Just consider the statistics.

There are over 1.8 billion users of the internet... and everyone, once logged in can contact anyone of the other 1.8 billion-1 through an email or a chat line. And the contact costs nothing more than the connection to the internet from whichever PC it is one is using. In addition there are so many hot spots that it could cost nothing.

According to one query responses were received from 266.9 million websites in December 2010... This is not necessarily the total number but these are definitely active websites. According to another posting in Science World as at June 2011 there are just short of 350 million websites registered. Still another report issued by a UK research company in November 2011 estimates that there are now 525 million websites and this includes 22 million that have been registered since last month. If true then 75,000 websites are coming online every day. Take your pick which number to believe but suffice it to say that there are a lot. No one has the ability to see them all (In 70 years of life one only has about 108,000 minutes available and one has to sleep and eat sometime as well).

Not all websites are active and there are many which exist to impart information (such as rail and flight times, the global clocks, up to date weather reports and news bulletins). Others exist as personal displays of things one has done or who they are, for example there are websites on just about any sports star.

But a very large percentage is devoted to eCommerce. Yes the internet is also a giant shopping mall, If you want to buy something then the chances are it can be purchased and paid for online. A huge industry has developed to create websites that showcase items in as an attractive manner as possible. Just such a one is a Web Design Agency Roma. They make use of some very good proprietary software to create a wonderful showcase of all the products in your range as only the Italian flair for display and marketing can do.

Emphasising the message and image one wished to convey is critical in making great use of the internet to make sales in Italy. Over 50% of all Italians use the internet and so with a good site one can reach a huge under-catered market.

As a separate module there is proprietary software dedicated to eCommerce. The web-store they offer is designed and developed to be fully independent of the web design company. Once they have done the development and handed it over to you, you will make your sales and collect the turnover all day every day, all you will have to do is deliver the sold items.

So if you want to sell items online in Italy then it this web design company can develop a fantastic showcase and web-store for you.
