Distributed under the GNU General Public License or GPL, Drupal is open source software supporting latest technologies that are being offered by the web. As an open development tool, Drupal software can be downloaded shared and even improved by ardent individuals who believe in keeping pace with the evolving technologies. “The Drupal Project Principles encourage modularity, standards, collaboration, ease-of-use and more”, enabling the development of thousands of additional components and layouts that one may envision. As a CMS or Content Management System, Drupal is being used to propel personal blogs and websites for varied large enterprises. It is a free, flexible, strong and a secured domain which can be easily managed by a non technical person. Nearly 2 % of websites world over use Drupal as their back-end system. Government websites like whitehouse.gov and data.gov.uk run on Drupal, clearly indicating the safety aspect of the software. As a Content Management System Drupal has won the best open source PHP, for two consecutive years in 2007 & 2008 respectively. If you wish to make Drupal CMS as part of your business venture you may hire Drupal Developer.

Drupal gives the option to install scripts that effectively augments database tables, thus configuring the apt setting for the settings.php file. As a platform, Drupal can do many things by offering a robust, secured Content Management System for large corporate web pages to personalized blogs. The project incorporating Drupal must clearly state the vision, goals and milestone. This is particularly important at a time when there is a requirement to hire Drupal Developer. It is therefore imperative to be aware of the nitty-gritty of the project to achieve stupendous results in the end.

Drupal is a scalable Content Management System conceding the development of any kind of functionality and feature that the site project, or the website demands. Sometimes, clients hire Drupal Developer for writing of a new module from scratch or just want some modifications in the existing module.

The complexity, time and requirement of the resource depend upon the vastness of the project. Advantage of Drupal is that it gives websites development an edge over the traditional methods of developing a website. The specification of Drupal allows its operation in multiple languages, thereby allowing its access to the wider community of people.

In the field of education Drupal CMS is a popular choice. The primary reason for this is that Drupal allows people to add information on the website, making the site interactive and alive. This allows a person to procure latest updates and information which in the field of education is a quite mandatory tool. Once a Drupal website is made live, it can be easily altered or edited by anyone who may or may not have a technical background. This feature of the website allows companies to save lot of money which is usually spent on specialized resources such as a Web designer, software engineer or a dedicated programmer.
