Tips in Finding a Web Design Agency in Melbourne by Jenevive Williams

Article published on January 25th 2012 | Web Design

Sometimes, having one too many options can be more confusing than helpful. For instance, when you do a search for a website design agency in Melbourne, youâ€™re bound to get over a million results. How do you wade through the options then to find the best in the lot? Here are some important things to keep in mind when narrowing down your choices:

What to look for:

Accessibility. An ideal website design firm has a good project management team that clients can easily reach. Communication is crucial in any relationship, so it would be good if an agency can explain website designs and solutions minus all the jargon. If the agency can establish good communication lines with you, then you can be assured that it would also be able to help you communicate your message to your audience. Aside from that, they must also be accessible. An agency based in Melbourne should make face-to-face meetings easy to schedule.

Proven track record. A good way to check a web design agencyâ€™s competence is to review its past and on-going projects. Testimonials serve as a good reference to check for client satisfaction. It is also important to see if the websites they develop provide variety. The website design that the agency will produce for you must be customised to fit your needs and preference. It would be good to go for an agency like Sct.com.au, which does not follow a house style, so every project is unique.

Value added services. It will great if a web design agency offers more than just web design and development. Value added services like search engine optimization can help boost your websiteâ€™s searchability. After all, even the most brilliant website design is useless if the people are unable to find your site.

What to avoid:

Ambiguity. If an agency drowns you in jargon instead of giving you straightforward answers, then you should reconsider your options. Everything should be transparentâ€”from the cost, to the number of people working on your project, to the website development process.

Templated designs. Web design templates might make it easy to produce a website, but it also means that the final product may not be in line with what you need. There are millions of websites on the Internet that you have to compete with and a templated website is not the way to go.

Finding the right web design agency in Melbourne can make or break your business. Choosing a web design agency is a crucial business decision that requires careful research and review. You should take your time and carefully consider all your options. Your website is your unique real estate on the Internet, so it should be the best online representation of your business.
