Article published on November 25th 2011 | Web Hosting

Starting a new business can be really tough for an entrepreneur, especially if the entrepreneur does not have any specialized knowledge about the field. To solve this problem a number companies have started offering reseller programs to its customers. These reseller plans allow the users to sell certain specialized services without having to worry about after sale services. The Internet industry has also taken a liking for the reseller business. A large number of web service providers have started offering Web Reseller programs that enables a user to become a reseller of web services.

As we all know having a website is considered among the most important things that a business requires. Web hosting companies have also realized its importance and have started providing its customers with an opportunity to become resellers of web hosting services. The Reseller Hosting business is among the newest forms of web hosting packages that allow a user to further sell its dedicated web hosting space to others. The business refers to web hosting service in which the service provider is actually an account holder of a web hosting plan. The reseller splits up his / her allocated web hosting space to further resell it to others. These packages allow a user to instantly roll out a reseller business without many hassles.

These resellers do not generally hold the responsibility for maintaining and running the servers used for web hosting. This job is primarily taken-care by the actual owner of the web hosting servers. Establishing a Reseller Hosting business has a number of advantages for a reseller. This business does not have any additional costs; a reseller only needs to purchase a reseller plan. This business also offers a chance to the reseller to sell hosting services under its own branding. The reseller can dedicatedly work towards expanding this business, as he will not be required to manage and maintain these servers. The reseller is permitted to host as many websites he / she desires depending upon the available disk-space and bandwidth.

Overall, this business is most appropriate for small businesses who wish to earn a profit via a small web hosting business. The reseller does not require put in great efforts to set up this business; as this problem has also been resolved by the ready-made hosting packages provided by the web hosting companies. This business is here to stay mainly because the demand for websites is expected to grow in near future.
