Choices and Ideas for Wedding Motifs and Decors by Kindra Leomiti

Article published on April 16th 2012 | Weddings

Weddings are both fun and stressful for everyone involved, and this interesting mix of contrasting feelings only intensify as the big day draws closer. If youâ€™re about to walk down the aisle, probably your biggest trigger is imagining how you want your wedding to look like. After all, there are simply too many themes and styles to choose from that it may be confusing to settle on something.

To give you a head start, determine if youâ€™d like your nuptials to be traditional and formal, or perhaps quirky with inspiration from pop culture. Your answer will considerably narrow down your focus on choices available. Feel free to make your own creative elements; just remember that the theme sets the overall feel of the event.

Deciding on the venue can also help you organize the overall theme and motif of your wedding. Many couples still get married in a church or another place of worship. There are those, of course, that opt to tie the knot in a courthouse, a private garden, a beach, and even a forest.

What follows after popping the question â€“ and getting a yes â€“ is ring selection to make everything official. The wedding and engagement rings San Diego couples wear creatively vary in design. Having a single gold or white gold band with a single stone held by four or six prongs is traditional and easily recognizable, but there are other, more unique concepts you can look into. The invisible and flush rings are interesting to look at as the stones are practically embedded in the band. If you have to have a more Asian-inspired jewelry, you can opt for a bezel ring which is set with stones and encased in a rim.

Dresses and fashion unquestionably evolved over time. Your theme, hence, can help you determine the unifying design of the dresses of the bridesmaids, and the wedding dress San Diego wedding planners can recommend. If you prefer modest, understated elegance, you can go for Edwardian, Greco-Roman, or 1900s-1950s-inspired fashions. Modest yet elaborate fashion designs, meanwhile, call for Victorian and Oriental-inspired designs.

Many wedding gowns San Diego brides wear have a wide balloon skirt with a long train, and a tube top resembling a corset. There are variations in this design; 1910s-1950s-inspired fashions involve modest, flattering designs. Curvy, full-figured brides may appreciate empire-cut wedding gowns to show her off from the best advantage. For more information, visit OffbeatBride.com.
