Now a day's couples usually invite their friends and their so called hi-tech relatives by sending their scanned wedding invitation through e-mails. The number of people to whom you want to send the wedding invitation will go up in future as everyone is becoming internet savvy.

Instead of sending your scanned invitation, it would be great if you create your own wedding website and invite your friends and relatives. It will be more useful, if the website, not only helps you to invite but it also helps you to share information about the couple, in depth details about the various wedding ceremony and so on.

All the above said features sound good. But if you think you don't know the technicality of creating a website, there is nothing to worry about it. This Invity.com site is designed in such a way that it helps to create your own wedding website easily and have a unique web address (URL).Â Creating the personal wedding website, this is similar to physically choose our wedding Invitation card.
