Planning a Secular Indian Wedding Ceremony by Deepak Verma

Article published on January 31st 2012 | Weddings

If you have no enough budget for well wedding planning, then do work on proper way so that every one feel happy in wedding day because wedding is one of the important ceremony in which every family member, relative and friends want to join.

A Wedding is a Wedding : If you are planning a secular ceremony, most wedding ceremonies look a lot alike. If couples want to marry by a judge in a courthouse, you still have some say over your ceremony, and it will be very similar to other ceremonies that take place in a church. The bride will walk down an aisle, and stand in front of whoever is ordained to perform the ceremony; rings will be exchanged; you will be pronounced husband and wife but if you want outdoor wedding and also you want it will look like a church ceremony then you can do it very well way. These types of wedding ceremony you can invite your family member, relatives and friends for making unforgettable event.

Religious Traditions that can Also be Secular : As we know in mostly ceremony all things are similar, there are some religious traditions that you might see in a religious marriage ceremony that can also be added to a secular ceremony. Ex: lighting a unity candle, this is similar Christian weddings but you can do at secular ceremony. You can add some addition things like present flowers to loved ones, and whoever is performing the ceremony typically will give a speech, just as a pastor would give a sermon.

How to Approach your Relatives : In these types of wedding ceremony, there are difficult task to invite your family member, relatives and friends. So if you are in control of the Wedding in India plans, you are in charge. Therefore, itâ€™s best not to tell them unless they ask. If they do ask, gently let them know what you have decided to do and give explanation to them the reasons why you decided to go that route. When they see the logic behind it, they may appreciate more than you expect.

What to do if someone is upset : If some body becomes upset for your planning then tell him/her reason. Explain good way so that they will be impress. Unfortunately, it is possible that someone may be upset by your choice, but the bottom line is that it is your wedding, and you should be married in a way that reflects your beliefs.
