Setting the Mood: an Overview of Wedding Venues by Kindra Leomiti

Article published on April 16th 2012 | Weddings

A wedding ceremony can be as intimate or extravagant as the bride and groom want it to be â€“ or can afford. However, the event requires a lot of preparation and planning, and seeing to the details can be quite overwhelming. Neither the bride nor groom, or their respective families, could be expected to handle everything without professional help. A wedding is only as good as its planning and execution from start to finish.

From among the myriad details, the brideâ€™s gown usually gets the major attention. The floral arrangements and other decors, food (including the wedding cake), drinks, transportation, the music (and entertainment), the invitations, and seating arrangements are only among the many other concerns that must be addressed. But one of the most important elements to ensure a successful wedding ceremony is the venue.

The wedding venue sets the mood for the entire event; it can provide the ambience for a romantic or nostalgic ceremony, or whatever theme you may want to project. It may be the place for both the actual marriage ceremony and reception, or may be separate venues. The number of expected guests, of course, would determine the size of the location. The time of your wedding also contributes to your decision on where you want it to be held.

In the US, some of the most popular wedding venues are located in Beverly Hills and Los Angeles areas. Both cities offer unique and interesting venues which the wedding party could enjoy to the fullest. For example, wedding venues in Beverly Hills take advantage of the cityâ€™s affluent and classy image, with places like Il Cielo, Chateau de Beverly Hills, and the Beverly Hills Hotel.

Couples who choose wedding venues Beverly Hills offers for the ceremony can expect nothing but the best service in both form and substance. Whether they want something intimate or grand, there are fabulous venues in the city to fit their preferences. Their wedding planner could help them make the right choice.

For those who prefer its larger neighboring city, couples may opt for wedding venues Los Angeles provides. This includes the Vibiana, one of the most glamorous wedding venues which hosted a lot of celebrity weddings in the past. Also popular venues in the city are the more affordable Victorian, and the Malibu Vineyards at Saddleback Ranch for those looking for countryside elegance.
