Article published on January 18th 2012 | Writing

The way a speech is delivered can speak volumes about the personâ€™s communicating abilities. Appropriate use of words and correct flow can add up to the effectiveness of the words. A good communicator should blend words with emotions to mesmerize the audience. People, who delivery speech often get confused about the way they should speak to the audience. Even though they have been in Military for years, they are still confused and often nervous when it comes to delivering a military speech. There are no strict rules for delivering military speeches. However, some basic features can make it effective.

While delivering a speech, it is important for the spokesperson to speak about the particular occasion and its significance for the audience. Focusing on the theme of the speech is important for attracting the attention of the addressees. While delivering a speech, the presenter may have to mention the names of one or many people. In order to avoid addressing them with wrong titles, the spokesperson should check their designations in advance. Complimenting people for their extra-ordinary services will cheer them. While delivering military retirement speeches, the spokesperson must speak about his contribution towards the country. The speech must have all the required sentiments that will inspire others.

The graduation day speech should mention the contributions required from the candidates. It should also have thankful words for the parents and families of the persons who are dedicating their life for the service of the country. Re-union speeches may not be very formal ones. They should have a humorous element in them. The spokesperson may talk about funny incidents that they faced during their service. This will be a reminder for all and the audience will enjoy the talk. While ending a military speech, the spokesperson should wish safety for all the people, who are posted abroad.

Like any other speech, military speeches also demand perfectionism. The presenter should practice the speech in advance to avoid any confusion. Well-written and well-presented speeches will be enjoyed by the audience.

Article Source:
http://www.articleside.com/writing-articles/essentials-of-a-good-military-speech.htm - Article Side

Speech Writers - About Author:
John, is a writer. John finds it easy to express his thoughts through writing. Only his experience in writing about a online speeches make him different from others.He feels happy with the privilege of sharing his knowledge and thoughts with world.

Article Keywords:
military speeches, military retirement speeches

You can find more free articles on Article Side. Sign up today and share your knowledge to the community! It is completely FREE!